

ZOE KEONE

If you build it, they will come.

Once a treacherous rope crossing, this Ethiopian bridge gained support from Rotarians halfway around the world in Virginia, USA. It took 25,000 pounds of steel and cement, carried to the remote site on the backs of 350 donkeys, to repair the crumbling bridge, but today it safely spans the Blue Nile. For more on this project and others afoot, see "Field Reports" on page 16.
